1. What is a COS 133 Learning Partner?

A COS 133 Learning Partner is a student in your section who is highly motivated and wants to achieve academic excellence in this course.

Your purpose is to make a stronger connection to the COS 133 course by teaming up with a productive classmate.

2. What are the Learning Partner responsibilities?

- The student is willing to get together before and/or after the class to review notes, to quiz one another, and to offer revision suggestions for assignments.
- If one of the learning partners is absent, the other learning partner will assist by sharing missed notes and helping out.
- If appropriate, the Learning partners will sit next to one another in class.
- Learning partners will share MCC student email addresses, and if agreed, phone numbers.
- The Learning partners will motivate each other when things get tough.

3. What qualities are you looking for in a learning partner?

________________________________
________________________________
________________________________
________________________________
________________________________
________________________________
________________________________
________________________________

4. What qualities do you offer as a learning partner?

________________________________
________________________________
________________________________
________________________________
________________________________
________________________________
________________________________
________________________________

5. Learning Partner Information

Name: ____________________________________________

Email: ____________________________________________

Phone: ___________________________________________
"Intellectual work leading to understanding requires a high degree of self-discipline, self-direction, and delayed gratification.

Yet many students come to school unwilling (and not always expecting) to work hard.

They typically misunderstand that their job is to construct understanding."